PROJECT

Budget Analysis for Your Business

- This type of cash flow analysis is called cash budgeting preparation and analysis. It is part of your firm's short-term financial forecasting plan. Determine the amount of cash that will flow into your firm during the month. If you are just starting your business, you should include the beginning balance in cash that you want to have available every month. There would also be the number of sales you have during the first month. Sales would include both cash sales and sales that you make to your customers who pay on credit
